very much. The activities or project will surely be loved by my kids and making crafts like the ones in the book can be used in our bonding time. This book taught me how to do portable pop-up dolls house, finger painted hyacinth blossoms, easy 'stained' glass windows, blossoming branches, personalized painted mugs, finger print key rings and my favorite is bath bomb LOL. I feel like a kid now. Awesome work!

By ValIt is the rainy season here. Which means being trapped in side, often with frustrated and bored kids! Believe it or not they actually do get tired of video games and programs. This book was the go to for a recent rainy weekend and it saved the day! I almost remembered a recipe for homemade clay/dough. Fortunately before I made my best guess at the recipe we found one in here for homemade Play Dough. We also did the pirate cork boats and the Potato prints. I'm not going to say that these projects were without their clean up - I still have green on the back of my hand from where someone got a little crazy with the potato printing - but they did keep everyone occupied.

By HaydenI had been trying to find some ideas of things to do to get my children away from electronics for the day and this book is exactly what I was looking for. The crafts within are educational, creative, fun, and not expensive to do. A lot of the projects use the same or similar supplies making it easy for you to make just one quick trip to Joann's or Hobby Lobby and have most everything you need for most of the projects. This is nice so that in the future when you want to do one of these projects you won't have to make an extra trip to the store first. A lot of reviews are complaining about a lack of pictures - For me personally, I didn't mind. I thought it made it more exciting not knowing what the finished product was going to look like!
